CONGRESSIONAL SCORECARD

Measuring Support for Equality in the 116th Congress

Dear Friends,

Over these last two years, Donald Trump and Mike Pence have remained relentless in their anti-equality attacks. From targeting LGBTQ people's access to health care, to supporting discrimination against LGBTQ people in the workplace, to the appointment of extreme anti-LGBTQ judges to the federal bench, this White House has redoubled their efforts to undermine our community's progress.

But the past two years have also seen critical steps towards LGBTQ equality at the federal level, thanks to the pro-equality majority in the U.S. House of Representatives. In May of 2019, the U.S. House passed the Equality Act. This is the first time a chamber of Congress has approved a comprehensive LGBTQ civil rights bill in our nation's history. The Supreme Court decision in Bostock this summer, affirming that sexual orientation and gender identity discrimination are prohibited under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, was an important step forward for LGBTQ equality, but much work remains. In many aspects of the public square, LGBTQ people still lack non-discrimination protections, which is why we need to make the Equality Act the law of the land to address the significant gaps in federal civil rights laws and improve protections for everyone.

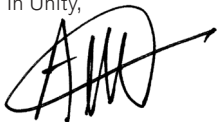

The interwoven nature of LGBTQ equality with the progress of all communities demands leadership committed to advancing justice for all. From working to increase public safety with the passage of long overdue gun background checks legislation, restoring the Voting Rights Act to ensure access at the ballot box, and guaranteeing Dreamers can stay in the only country they have ever known, pro-equality leaders in the House advanced crucial legislation for marginalized communities across the nation. And thanks to this pro-equality majority in the U.S. House, our elected champions were able to block legislation seeking to undermine our progress.

If the U.S. House has been busy working for the welfare of the American people, the U.S. Senate's tenure for the past two years has been marked by inaction and misplaced priorities. Instead of advancing pro-equality legislation, the Senate's leadership has stymied their progress. Rather, the Senate has focused on confirming as many individuals to lifetime seats on the federal bench as possible. In addition to their lack of diversity, many appointees lack the basic qualifications—as objectively assessed by the American Bar Association—to sit on the federal bench. And a great many have shown hostility to LGBTQ people.

We hope this scorecard will aid in understanding your elected officials' records on issues impacting the LGBTQ community and society's most marginalized. And we hope it is a valuable tool in holding your elected officials accountable in our shared work towards meaningful, positive change.

As the late Representative John Lewis wrote, "Democracy is not a state. It is an act, and each generation must do its part to help build what we called the Beloved Community, a nation and world society at peace with itself."

In Unity,
